UNE LANGUAGE FOR CHINA.

The adoption of the Kuanhua or Mandarin as the national language of China has been discussed by educators and others in this country to a considerable extent during the last ten years. It is coming to be understood more and more, as the nation is gradually awakening from its lethargy and inertia, that the question of the possession of a common language is a matter of supreme impurlance in connexion with the unification of a great mass of people, such as is found in China. The subject is, in some respects, as worthy of consideration as the currency question on which so much lately has been said and written. It is satisfact my to notice that Chinese writers are now discussing it, not infrequently in un able and forcible manner, in newspapers and magazines which have a respectable circulation in the great centres of the Empire. It is evident that they are beginning to realize its importance from a national point of riew. In due time we may not unreasonably expect to see some tangible result of so much thought and attention as is now being given to the subject by the Chinese themselves. There can be no question that the rapidly changing conditions, now being witnessed in China, will sooner or later make it imperative that one common language shall be the medium of intercommunication between all classes of the people, a language that will be practically identical both in its written and spoken forms and will serve as a common repository of thought and medium of communication throughout the Empire. "This language must be the language of the senate, the language of the forum, the language of the rostrum and pulpit, the language of the schoolroom and the language of the Press." The difficulties in the way of the accomplishment of this laudable object are neither few nor easy to overcome. But there is no reason to assume that they are insuperable, and there need be no reason to take other than an optimistic view of the situation. Chinese writers have explained what, from their point of view, are some of the advantages that would be likely to accrue to the nation as the result of the adoption of the Kuanhua La the common language of the people in all parts of the Empire. It is contended that it will make them more sympathetic towards each other, and tend to lessen, or even altogether. obliterate, that strong feeling of suspicion and dislike, to employ no stronger terms, which is so frequently displayed by the peonie of one province towards those of another. This will also mean that internal commerce will be greatly developed and carried on under much more favourable conditions than at present. It will indirectly bring about the removal of many vexatious impedimenta which at present exercise a deterrent effect on the trade and commerce of the country. The complaint that Chinese students educated abroad frequently write in foreign languages rather than their own no longer will be heard when the ensity acquired and widely understood Kuanhua displaces the difficult and, comparatively speaking, little understood Wentl as the written language of China. An enormous increase, also, would soon be observable in the number of those able to read, which would inevitably tend to-bring about a much higher order of intelligence among the people than at present exists. If, as one writer lucidly put it, China wishes to keep abreast of the times and swim in the tide of progress, she must not for one moment neglect the education of her people; and nothing would lend itself so well to this purpose as the adoption of Kuanhua as the sole medium of instruction in her schools all over the Empire .- Looking forward, also, to the time when China will have a Constitutional Government, it will be readily understood how essential it will be that the language employed in the deliberative assemblies should be identical with the one employed by the people in the common everyday intercourse of business and social life. One other point of considerable importance is that the possession of a common language should tend to centralize governmental power, and bring the widely separated provinces and depen dencies of the Empire into closer relationship and union with Government. It is contended by some, that while there is no question as to the desirability of securing a common language for the whole of China, there are, at the same time, grave doubt as to whether the Kuanhua will meet the requirements of the case. If this be so it is difficult to coniccture what could be advanced as a substitute Kuanhua is at present the prevailing speech of all but three provinces and probably is understood by at least five-sixths of the whole population of the Empire. That it has serious defects as a language for everyday use will be readily admitted. It is, for example, not well adapted to receive help from other languages. The great modern languages of the Western world have been greatly enriched and beautified, and rendered infinitely more useful, by their capacity to borrow from other languages, both ancient and modern. The peruliar nature of the Chinese language precludes the doing of this, at least to any appreciable extent. It may be, however, that, in course of time, some genius; will arise who wil he able to suggest such improvements of the language as' will furnish some adequate remedy for this and other defects which might be indicated. Unquestionably as the people go forward in the path of progress their language will have to be pruned and modified to suit the altered state of things. But this is only what has happened to the English, German and other languages, which, by long processes of evolution, have develop d into such efficient instruments of everyday speech. There are no very cogent reasons why the Kuanhua should not slaoundergo such modifications as will make it fit for the purpose suggested-to become the common vehicle of speech in all parts of the vast [62 | Chicase Empire.-N. SHANGHAL "SHARB" CASE.

DENJAMIN'& POTTS W. GORDIUS 'NEILSEN. At Shanghai, on the 17th inst., in the Danish Consular Court, before Mr. T. Ranschou, Conand, acting judicially, this case again came on for hearing.

Mr. L. E. P. Jones appeared for the plaintiffs, Mr. N. C. Home represented the defend-

Mr. Jones filed the original promissory note, and the following in reply to defendant:-PLAINTIFFS' REPLY.

1.-The plaintiffs deny that the defendant at any time instructed (as alleged) G. H. Potts not to hold the shares if they fell more than six or at most seven points, but to sell them forthwith if they should fall and that the said G. H. Potts promised to do so. The plaintiffs are not aware of the exact date of the defendant's departure for Europe from Shanghai in 1902, but it appears to have been at a later period than May 9, 1902. Between March 18, 1902, and May 9, 1902, the shares had already dropped more than seven points, to wit twenty points, yet on May 9, 1902, the defendant wrote to the said G. H. Potts a letter, a copy of which, letter from Mr. Laulsen is attached hereto. The plaintiffs further say that the defendant left Shanghai in '1902 without giving the plaintiffs any definite instructions to sell the said shares and on the contrary left them it the hands of the plain:iffs.to be "turned over" or sold at their discretion.

2,-()n the defendant's return to Shanghai towards the latter part of 19 2 the defendant ratified and confirmed what the plaintiffs had done on his behalf in pursuance of his said instructions, including the selling of the shares and executed the promissory note and acknowledgment of indebtedness of December 2, 1902,

3.-The plaintiffs deny that "the whole transaction was a fictitious gaming transaction' and that "the plaintiffs did not buy and sell or hold any shares on the defendant's account and attach hereto copies of the entries in their books showing the whole transaction and copies of the contract notes signed in connexion therewith.

4.-The plaintiffs bring into Court for inspection the original promissory, note and acknowledgment of indabtedness of December

Dated this 14th day of September, 1907. LOFTUS E.P. JONES,

Counsel for the Plaintiffs. Mr. Jones also filed a number of letters forming the correspondence relating to the different lots of shares which plaintiffs alleged they purchased for defendant. Then followed copies of items in the account books of plaintiffs. Mr. Jones said that the defendant had already inspected the originals referred to in this document.

Mr. Home said it was not necessary to reply to the documents filed, but the parties should proceed to call evidence.

Mr. Jones said the defendant should first call

Mr. Home said certain facts had been alleged by the parties, and these facts had not been proved to the Court. It was for the plaintiffs to show that as a matter of fact they had expended the sum, which they alleged; on defendant's account, and until they had done that plaintiffs. had not made out their case.' Counsel submitted that plaintiffs should substantiate the facts in their pleadings by proof. General-Managers. Mr. Jones contended that it was defendant's duty to call evidence first.

His Honour said that plaintiffs had filed their statement and defendant should now call evidence if he wished to do so. Unless fresh points were raised by defendant's evidence the plaintiffs' case was closed.

An argument as to the method of procedure to be adopted then took place. Mr. Home asked his Honour to fix a day for the next hearing, and then counsel would decide what course he would follow. His Honour said that the questions must be drawn up by counsel, but they would be put to the witnesses by the Court; but that did not prevent counsel from asking other questions; The case was adjourned until Tuesday next at 2 o'clock.

"IS THAT TRUE!"

"Is that true" was the somewhat disconcerting exclamation of His Excellency 'Sir Frederick Lugard when he was informed that his inaugural shot over the new rifle range at the Peak on Saturday had scored "possible." Everybody knows how these pleasant affairs are arranged and everybody is pr pared for the perfectly proper signal which follows the opening of a rifle range by the chief administrator of the Colony. His Excellency, however, not being versed in these happy evidences of friendly feeling and encouragement had his doubts and, no doubt to the astonishment of those in attendance, gave expression to them. Whatever the answer to his query was, and we are not told that any was offered, there is an application in His Excellency's question which if carried to its ultimate, limits must involve important issues in the conduct of the administration of Hongkong's public affairs. When a Governor arrives in a colony where the conditions are totally different in every respect to those to which his previous experience has accustomed him, it is but natural that he should accept the views and ideas of those who come within his immediate circle. These views may, of course, be admirably suited to the needs of the Colony, or they may be simply the stereotyped expression of a hide-bound bureaucracy. It is for the Governor to discover for himself the real situation, and therefore it is | Critic. that all who are interested in the welfare of the Colony will rejoice in believing that the independent character of, His Excellency mind may be traced in the remark, made almost unconsciously, "Is that true?" At the present time there is scarcely a single | castaways reported that their sampan was run question of public concern on which any half dozen residents in Hongkong are agreed. More or less, people are united in expressing their views on the subject of reforms, but when it comes to details hopeless confusion abounds. On the subject of opium, to take torday. "You did?" asked Mr. Melbourne, one example, the correct attitude to assume | calmly. Then Partab recollected himself is that in favour of abolition. In order to attain this end a few harmless and otherwise well-meaning zealots present statements which they naturally assert to be facts, and by a lavish expenditure of embroideries seek to foist their views on the Government regardless of the opinions of those most concerned. The average official in a Crown

Colony, or at all events those at the head of departments, is but a transient visitor and it is accordingly his aim to steer a middle way between contending parties, on the principle that the smaller the fuss the greater the prospects of promotion. The question eventually comes before the Governor who, disdaining to take everything for granted, asks " Is that true?" not with the object of receiving a reply in the affirmative, but in order that all the proofs which have convinced his subordinates may be laid before him. Of course, the question itself is as old as the hills; it was rendered historical by Pontius Pilate; it was, perhaps, the original remark which ushered duplicity into the world. At the same time while a statement may in itself be true, it may conceal a very material portion of the truth-in other words it may not be the whole truth, and that applies very particularly to Hongkong. There is hardly a report or set of statistics relating to conditions in Hongkong which is not susceptible to criticism on that point, A Commission is appointed to investigate a certain question; the opinions of the members are known to everybody and the result is a foregone conclusion, because it follows. that any examination that may take place is confined to the confirmation of the views already expressed. In the majority of instances, those views or premises have been hammered and pounded into the heads of those who are not prepared to take the trouble to think for themselves, with the result that those who cavil at finding or suggest that there is another side to the question are regarded as intolerant reactionaries. "If His Excellency the Governor, in the consideration of the affairs which come under his review, in the course of his daily duties, keeps the question "Is that true?" as his lodestone, his task of securing the welfare of the Colony will be vastly increased; but the end will justify his labours, provided that the bottom of the well is thoroughly dredged. ... Indeed, there is [probably no resident in Hongkong who is more greatly handicapped in the acquisition of the entire facts pertaining to any public matter than His Excellency the Governor. Living in a screne atmosphere where the immediate difficulties of the governed are not apparent, and surrounded by those whose main anxiety is to give the Colonial Office as little trouble Denmark when the opposite is the case.

as possible, the Governor may be inclined to believe that all is well in the State of is not for the hoi-polloi, the native residents, the underpaid civit servants, the unrepresent ed taxpayers to biazon forth their grievances or to chanour about the disabilities under which they labour. Their duty is to remain quiet, and truth to tell that is not a very difficult thing for them to do, for the major portion of those few hours which are left to them after the toil of the day are generally. spent in solving the problem, a veritable pous asinorun in many cases how to make both_ends_meet.__idowever,_we_may-take-itthat His Excellency Fir Frederick Lugard comes to the work of administrating the affairs of Longkong with the broad determination to find out, in the first place, the whole truth and then to act upon his knowledge of the truth. 'n any event, the snapbuilding, as jail or any other class' ped-out query "Is that true?" will not be building is constructed of reinforced lost on that fraternity which would bolster up bogus claims or support impossible asserannually including the construction tions by means of fabricated facts. Sir Frederick Lugard has given the Colony a existing buildings being truly enormous. pointer which is eminently accessary in these the United States the growth of the use cement has been marvellous. ARRAIGNED AT THE MAGISTRACY.

PLEADS "NOT GUILTY" TO THE CAPITAL Adsetts, the alleged murderer of Gertrude

L'ayton, whose body was discovered jammed in a trunk on board the C. P. R. liner Monteagle in August last, under circumstances so well known to the Hongkong public; whose escape from the Colony on the Tosa Maru' shortly after the tragedy; his arrival and disappearance from Shanghai; his capture and re-capture at Chefon, after breaking away from the gaol; his removal to Manila on the U.S. ship Galverton and the opening of extradition proceedings against him at that port have been so closely followed by the "man-in-the street," landed in Hongkong last night, from the steamer Rubi, in charge of Detective O'sullivan and Policeman Perkins,

The Rubi steamed up to her moorings shortly after eight o'clock last night, and from her masthead shone forth the police-call lights brilliantly. A police launch, with Chief Detective Inspector Hanson, Inspector Watanch Sergts, Terrett and Earner and Policeman Watt on board, which had been waiting in the vicinity for the arrival of the liner, put alongside immediately, and soon afterwards Adsetts, handcuffed, his legs shackled, was escorted down the gangway and on to the launch.

A large crowd had assembled on Blake pier when the launch warped alongside. And when the alleged murderer landed on the pier th police had some difficulty in keeping back the crowd which was pushing its was to the fore all eager to catch a glimpse of the man, of whom they had heard so much.

Adsetts was not to be seen, however. Dress ed in a pair of dark blue pants, frailed at the ends, and a half soiled singlet, wearing panama hat, turned down in front, covering his forehead, he walked up the pier with his head bowed low, puffing vigorously at cigarette, regardless of the hundreds of pairs of eyes that were focussed at him. He, was conducted to a chair that was awaiting him and the journey to police headquarters started, the crowd following in processional order. Arriving at the Control Station Adsetts was taken before Inspector Ritchie, who asked him a lew

"What's your name?" was the first question put to Adsetts.

" William Hall Adsotts," came the reply in a coarse voice. "What are you by occupation," was the next query. "A tinsmith," Adsetts answered, looking

In what State were you born?"

"Pitiladelphia," with a drawl,

And with that Adsetts was taken to a cell misus his handcuffs, but with his anklets sti on, there to pass the night.

Naedless to say, when it is told that Adsetts was held in irons on board ship, nothing of any exciting character occurred. But notwithstanding that fact Detective O'Sullivan and Policeman Perkins kept a strict watch over their poisoner, so much so that during the trip they had scarcely any time for sleep. Both officials speak highly of the conduct of Captain Almond and his officers, who showed them every attention while they were on board Adsetts is a large, rawhoned, muscular looking man, about six feet till, and with light brown hair. He has several gold teeth in the upper jaw, which are very prominent. He seems to be more or less calloused through his varied experiences during the past six weeks and tries to be stoically calm. He carries a matter of fact air as though his arrest did, not prey on his mind, but it is belied by the restless and wild looks in his eyes. If he appeared non-plussed in the charge-room it was not so'a few minutes later for when once in his cell he wore his disguise once more and tried to be communicative. He called for water, which was given him he, spoke of the trip and of the news papers, and complained; in no few words. of the severé pains round his ankles, which was caused by the leg froms, and which, he said, he had worn for a month. Then he switched on to his escapate at Chefoo. Speak! ing to an official of his escape from the Chefoo gaol, Adjetts remarked that any man, under such circumstances, would have done the same as he did, when there was a hole in the roof of the prison.

As he was about to go into details regarding his escape another police officer, dressed in plain clothes, approached his cel Advetts gave him a wild cat state and, saying more to himself that to anyone else, "That's another of those --- reporters that have been having a lot of thrash to say about me," fell back and went asleep. He refused to say

This morning he appeared to be in a more cheerful frame of mind. He sat at the door o his cell, his knees bent under his chin; an seemed to be very interested in the corralling of the Chinese prisoners for the police court, "How's it, this morning?" a police officer asked him, "All I want is a bath," he replied, "and I'd, be happy. I haven't had one for some time." Somebody from the Detective's office was the next to attract 'his attention. Adsetts noticed that a policeman was studying his face with a photograph, which he held in his hand. "That's a fine picture you have there of me," he bawled out, "Let's see?"

The picture was turned in his direction, "Who's the woman?" he interrogated.

"The woman you took the photograph with," was the reply.

'Adsetts had a hearty laugh and turned away. When the news got around in the forencon that the prisoner would soon appear in Court the British detectives would never land him in crowd-for there was alarge crowd of Europeans and Chinese present-besieged the Court, all anxious to set eyes on him, or any person take 1.0'Sollivan and Perkins. ing an obscure part in the trial. By the time Adsells was escorted into the dock there was scarcely standing room in the Court, even the doors were blocked. When Adsetts faced the Court to answer the indictment there was scarcely a sound in the court-room. "William Hall Adsetts," rang out the interpreter, "you are charged, that you did on the 4th August, 1907, feloniously and of malice aforethought kill and slay one Gertrude Dayton against the peace of our Forereign, his Crown and dignity. What say you to the charge -guilty or not guilty ?"

"Not guilty," answered the prisoner in a strong voice.

Inspector Hanson-The police want a week's remand, your Worship.

Mr. Melbourne-I am afraid I can't give you next week.

Inspector Hanson-What is the first day? Mr. Melbourne-I have Monday next week; but I don't know when you will be ready. Inspector Hanson-The Crown Solicitor wil prosecute, your Worship. The next hearing was fixed for Monday after-

And Adsetts, looking restless, with a vacant stare in his eyes, his cheeks sunken, and his face ashen, was removed to the Victoria Gaol there to await his trial-the trial which will prove one of the most interesting that has ever been heard in a Court in this Colony.

Adjetts, the alleged slayer of a courtes in might in his present state of development and under happier conditions, be passed by the unobserving as an average young man of the middle-class, with some claims to an attraction that would exercise its powers in a circle which flyts from dark till dawn in the isolated glow of the red-light district.

But to the phrenologist, the alienist, even i the present cloud did not darken his horizon the man would present a study worthy of attention, writes Mr. John Roberts in the Manila Cablerens, In the case of a man under sentence, a man convicted, the crowded, stifling courtmoni, whether it be in the East or West, whether the prisoner stands in the shadow of Bilibid, San Quentin or Sing Sing, presents the same curious throng agape with wonder and morbid curiosity. Correlated, to the ordinary onlooker, the criminal stands for crime; but to the student of degrees, the actual suspension of the power to do means simply the lack of further opportunity. Opportunity, temptation sufficiently worth the risk, this gives the clowd a chance to push and sweat and stand patient ly for hours in order to witness the anguish, bravado, or indifference of the offender.

The head of this man, at the bar of justice awaiting a terrible doom if proven guilty of the most revolting of murders, is not the one of a crafty, methodical villain. It is small with cose cars, almost entirely undeveloped, and Gall's theory that the head or skull shows the usage of the mental faculties would go to the wall at once when judging of the smooth surface of this man's cranium.

No use of the special functions which have left such valuable records in the Rogue's Gallery is responsible for the fullness of the jaw, the heaviness of lip, the dull, sullen light that flashes from out of the prominent blue eyes, These features sag, sag toward the weak, cleft chin, sag with the lawlessness of an unbridled will, say with the dominance of passions that knew no restraint. FAILURE IN THE HAHEAS CORPUS

Judge Gilbert will render his decision in the Adsetts case this (September 21) morning at o'clock, which will, undoubtedly be to the effect that the suspected murderer of Gertrude Dayton must be turned over to the Hongkong detectives who are here waiting to conduct him to. Hongkong to face trial.

The failure of the attorneys for the defence to enter an appeal from the decision in the habeas corpus proceedings within the stipulated time has lost for them an opportunity of down, striking a coolie, named Chang Fuk. prolonging the life of the accused, as the evidence secured by the Hongkong authorities is convincing, and the case for Adsetts is dark, party to catch the steamer Rubi which is scheduled to leave Manila for Hongkong to-day.

Shoold the party be able to catch this ship. there will be lit-le danger of Adsetts making an escape, once he is taken abourd. The Rubi is fitted with a strong room which would be impossible to break out of without outside aid; and the prisoner will be heaviiy handcuffed and secured with leg irons.

FINAL ARGUMENTS.

The final arguments of the defending and prosecuting attorneys were completed yesterday morning, when Judge Gilbert announced that he would render his decision this morning. PRISONER NERVOUS.

Adsetts showed some signs of weakening yesterday, and paid little sttention to the proceedings. He contented his self by sitting motionless in his chair seldom glancing from, the floore A. decided twitching of the jaw muscle, quick winking of the eyelids and the constant, nervous moving of his feet showed plainly that he was worried and frightened. With the knowledge that there is sufficient proof with which to convict him, and that he will be ordered delivered to the Hongkong authorities to day weighed heavily on his mind yesterday, and when Judge Gilbert denied Attorney Southworth's application for appeal." from the decision in the habeas corpus proceedings the prisoner seemed to sink further in his chair and heaved a heavy sigh which was noticeable to all who sat near him.

Judge Gilbert denied the application -as ; the time for making it had expired by scarce seven minutes. Attorney Southworth said that he knew the law provided but twenty." four hours in which to enter an appeal and that he thought the spirit of the law had been complied with in entering the appeal in a few minutes over twenty-four bouts. Attorney George held for the strict enforcement of the

JUDGE GILBERT'S DECISION.

In speaking of this particular point Judge Gilbert'said, " The law was made for a purpose. This case is not one of a local character among ourselves, it includes others, especially the nation of Great Britain and it would seem strange to that nation if I did not enforce the law, or if I allowed the law to be violated in this particular case. I will grant the motion of the prosecuting attorney for dismissal." This was Adsetts' last hope, and, although he knew he must eventually face trial the hopes of having this delayed by an appeal, in the habeas corpus proceedings was shattered by Judge Gilbert's above decision and the prisoner, for the moment, at least, resigned himself to his fate, but it is said that by the time he had reached the Luneta station after the hearing he had recovered his composure and assumed his usual deflant

AN ADMIRABLE PRISONER.

Adaetts so far has been an admirable prisoner contrary to the expectations of the local authorities. " His known reputation as a roughand-tumble fighter and the belief that he wouldbe desperate and willing to chance death in an effort to escape made the police in whose care the prisoner was placed extra cautious. Although. he will not be turned over to the British officials until after 8 o'clock this morning it is believed' that if he decides to make any trouble it will not be until after he is placed in their keeping.

Many are the stories of the bar-room brawls and rough house fights Adsetts has taken a prominent part in. When he was in the marine corps and stationed at Cavite he took exception to the ruling of an umpire during a baseball game between his company and a company of marines from Olongapo and despite the fact that the umpire was a man fully six feet tall, Adsetts struck him one blow renderplan and cheat the gallows; these conceal with ling him unconscious for over an hour and splintered his jaw. Shortly afterwards he was set upon by a crowd of about nire angry baseball players during a game at Even if there is no murder to his count, Olongapo and single handed he came out of the fight no worse than any one of his eight or history of the close kinship with the bawdy- nine assailants, two of whom were injured so severely that it was necessary to carry them to of the square look in a man's eye, the loss of the hospital. He is known along the China coast as a bad man and many are the fales of his single handed fights with sailors from foreign ships, That he will take long chances to escape, and that he will grow more desperate as the time carries him nearer his goal there is no E. O'sullivan, who will be responsible for his safe deliverance to the Hongkong authorities, will guard him day and night and keep him tightly manacled. Once in Hongkong, with such a complete chain of convincing evidence, W. rt. Adsetts, affas Jones, alas Anderson, alias Davis will probably be punished with death in less than two weeks as is the custom. of the British authorities in such cases.

LANDSLIP AT HUNGHOM.

EARTH COOLIE KILLED.

A landslip occurred at Hunghom sesterday norning, as a result of which a cu lie who was employed in the vicinity lost his life. The accident occurred at the Railway Reclamation Works, near the old slaughter house, shortly after eight o'clock. A gang of contractor's coolies were engaged at work at the foot of a bant. Some were cutting away at the b' nk. while others were engaged in filling a truck with the earth. While the coolies were thus employed the bank suddenly co'lapsed. A huge amount of sand and rock came crashing In falling backwards the coolie struck his head against the metal of one of the wheels of the truck, fracturing his skull. The other crolies' who were fortunate enough to escape injury removed the injured man to a nearby shed and the police were sent for. THE SICAWEL OBSKRVATORY.

AN APPRECIATION

At first sight it may appear strange that the work of studying the heavens is undertaken by a religious order; in reality, however, from remote ages there has been an intimate connexion between religion and astronomy. The Fathers at Sicawei surely are animated by the spirit of the padmist who cried: When I consider thy heavens, the wirk of thy fingers. the moon and the stars which thou hast ordained ; what is man that thou art mindful of him i and the son of man that thou visitest him. The Josuit Fathers were the first to introduce the results of the observations of Western astronomers into China, and at Sicawei they are now continuing the labours which began with the arrival on Chinese soil of Mateo Ricci and Verbiest True, that work has suffered from long interruptions, but to the Jesuits the Chinese owe the calendar at present in use, and to the same order mariners in Far Eastern waters at the present day are indebted for invaluable information placed at their disporal by the unostentatious and patient labours of the Fathers at Sicawei. For icawei is

THE MOST IMPORTANT OBSERVATORY on the Chinese coast. Daily throughout the year it receives meteorological and otherdata by telegraph from about sixty stations, and by careful comparisons of figures, by ceaseless watching and patient care, the risk to mariners from ty hoons and storms is reduced to a minimum. With his finger on an electric swith at Sicawei one, of the Fathers daily gives the standard time to China, and as noon approaches, on nearly every vessel in sight of the signal station, chronometers are checked or set as the time-ball falls.

MAGNETIC INSTRUMENTS.

Sicawei is not an astronomical observatory in the true sense of the word. . It does possess a small telescope, by means of which the Fathers 'can photograph or observe the phenomena of the heavens, but the real work of the institution in the study of meteorological conditions, and the recording of seismological and magnetic observations. Particular interest attaches to the latter at this time, as, owing to the advent of the tramways, all the magnetic instruments are shortly to be transferred to Quinsan. By the courtesy, of the Pirector of the Observatory the Shanghai ociety of Engineers and Architects will this afternoon (sept. 21) have an opportunity of inspecting these instruments, a courlesy extended to a representative of this paper a few days ago. Father de Moidrey, who has been at the Observatory for mine years, kindly undertook the office of guide for the occasion. The first visit was to the small building in which the magnetic costruments are housed. In this building there are three rooms, In the smallest is a new and, to the uninitiated, very complicated earth inductor, or dip circle for showing the dip of the magnet. The instrument is levelled and connected with a galyanometer. . THE TRANSIT TELESCOPE.

Passing the small observatory, where the astronomical telescope is mounted we came to the vicinity of the seismograph. This instrument, by which records of earthquakes at the other side of the globe have been obtained, I was not permitted to see, Father de Moidrey explaini g that the presence of two men in the neighbourhood would seriously disturb it. We passed the little but in which it, is enclosed, therefore, at some distance, and ploceeded past the workshop, where one of the brothers undertakes repairs, and even the making of new instruments, to the time-observation apparatus. The transit telescope, by which the correct time is ascertained daily, is a new and beautiful instrument, but so complicated that it would require an expert to . do it justice. . Six or seven levels are used for edjusting it, one of which shows the true level within two seconds, on a scale. At night a purtion of the roof above it is removed. The telescope is then set to a position corresponding approxi- 'Supreme Grand Chapter of England, assisted

One of the pencils was marking a line on the paper every second, clicking backwards and forwards as it did so. It was recording the direction of the wind. Each point of the compass has its own pencil, and should the wind be between two of the points two pencils are set in motion. Another "moving finger" was writing in lines that only the initiated could read the force of the wind as recorded by the anemometer at the top of the tower. Yet another was following the vagaries of the barometer, and there were attachments for showing the readings of the thermometer and of the rain gauge. The use of the latter pencil has been discontinued here, because it is considered unscientific to take the rainfall from the roof. The present gauges are all in the grounds.

THE LIBRARY. At the end of the hall is the library, a fine lofty-room, the shelves of which are stocked with the publications of other observatories and scientific societies. On a blackboard bearing a rough map of the coast of China, a Brother has just traced the barometric readings as received by telegraph that morning. He is now at the telephone, takin; down more readings that have just been received at the signal station on the Jund. The most prominent feature of the chait of the blackboard is the series of circles that show the position of a typhoon. Were I to describe more instruments, there would be fear of this article developing into a scientific catalogue. It must suffice to say that there are barometers innumerable in the observatory and grounds, thermometers in the sun, in the shade, above and below the ground and in a well, a sunshine recording instrument, 'an "apparatus för receiving Bertzian waves and thus indicating the proximity of a thunderstorm, 1 y visit concluded with When no current is discernible the readings the ascent of the clock tower. REFORMS IN THE TWO KWANG.

THE NEW VICEROY'S PROPOSALS.

A well-authent cated despatch from Honan states that H.E. Chang-Jen-thon, the Viceroy of Liang Kwang, has forwarded three suggestions to the Throne about his policy before starting from Kai-fong-fu for Canton. These suggestions are as follows: -

be his subordinates to assist him in carrying out the principal reforms he intends to inaugu-

2-To improve the source of provincial revenue in order to ease the financial situation. 3-To settle the disputes connected with the Canton-Hankow Railway in an amicable way for the purpose of enabling the Railway Compiny to start the work as soon as possible Branch lines of this railway will be constructed first in order to connect the line with the railways running to Footh w, Kwangsi ar Kiangsi .- Shoughoi Timen

THE HONGKEW TRAGEDY.

It appears that the Indian who was arrested early yesterday morning, reports the N. C. D News of aist inst., lives two doors away from the house in which the tragedy occurred and inquiries made on the spot disclosed the fact that he had some knowledge of the occurrer ce At the police station, however, he made statements, highly improbable they appeared at first, which led to his own release and the arrest of a w.man named Minna Medal at Yangtsepoo early in the foren-on by Det. Insp. "cDowell and another foreign detective. The woman was at once formally charged and taken before the Austro-Hungarian Consular Court, where Herr Kobr, Vice-Consul, conducted a preliminary hearing, which lasted all the morning and the greater part of the afternoon. The case in which Indian police constable. gos summoned the proprietor of the Yee Yin gardens, Wong-nei-chong, for permitting ferocious dogs to be at large unmuzzled was conclude I at the Police Court, this forenoon.

The projecutor gave evidence to the effect that while pissing the accused's gardens, on duty one morning last week, he was attacke l by two dogs. Witness exhibited a mark on his leg and a pair of torn pants as evidence.

Mr. Melbourse-What kied of dogs were

Witness-Brown dogs. What breed?-I don't know. They have very bad faces-and long teeth. (Laughter). Inspector Gourlay explained that the dogs were bull-terriers.

Accused stated that one afternoon last week the Indian policeman called at his shed. Bl dogs were about and started barking. 'He asked complainant what he wanted. "A drink," was the reply. Accused said he could not supply him with any, and the policeman went away. The same afternoon he returned with an Indian sergeant, who asked accused if he had a licence for the dogs. TIBNTSIN.

As we briefly approunced a few days ago, the Hongkong authorities have decided to close the British Post Office at Tientsin at the end of this month. The Peking and Tientsin Times describes this decision as "not only inconvenience of the gravest kind, but a serious financial loss to the community." It asserts that if the proposal is carried through, it will mean that private and business mail matter which for the past year has come to port under the penny postal regulations will, for three months come to the recipients "surcharged to the hilt with both the foreign and domestic rates of the Chinese Imperial Post, doubled by penalty." The same paper understands that the local branch of the China Association and the Chamber of Commerce are taking the matter up warmly. Representations are said to have been made to the British Minister and also to the Hongkong office. Our Northern neighbours have our sympathy, and we hope that their representations will end in the rescinding of the order. We believe it would be false economy to close the Post Office at Tientsin while so many less important ports continue to enjoy the facilities which the presence of a local branch of the British Post Office brings. The importance of a cheap, efficient and regular mail service to a commercial community cannot be over-estimated, and the port which has the second largest foreign commercial community in China is certainly entitled to consideration .- N. C. D.

"THE FOREIGN COMMUNITY AS SEEN FROM BEHIND!

JAPANESE JOURNALIST ON THE PROWL

It is somewhat surprising to find a journal of the reputation and standing of the Oraka Anahi filling its columns with what amounts to nothing less than the abuse of the foreign re-: sidents of Kobe. Under the above heading one of the staff of our Osaka contemporary has set out to "expose" the life of the foreigners who are fortunate or unfortunate enough to find themselves demiciled in what is known to the rest of the world as, "polite," "happy" and/or "sunny" Japan. The vituperations of the Japanese scribe are funny were it not for the impression such reading is likely to have upon the lower and more ignorant classes who will doubtless peruse the series of articles with avidity; and, with the treatment of the Japanese on the Pacific Coast in mind-treatment which none deplore more than the foreign residents in Japan-they are likely to utilise it to the full, for foreigners are frequently subjected to insults from coolies and such people, and this kind of writing encourages them.

The writer begins by describing the port of Kobe as the entrance-way to Japan, but the place of origin of halkarra taste and the "deplorable customs of civilisation." Whether Kobe deserves the title of the gateway of Japan is more than the writer cares to say, but he asks: Just imagine what will become of Kobe when 400 foreign firms and 3,000 foreign merchants (sic) have been taken away from the port? (It will be seen that the writer has made up his mind that the foreingers are to be "taken-away.") -Will not the reality of Kobe being the entrance-way of Japan be then extremely doubtful? Gratifying as it is to know that Kobe is the most prominent foreign trade post in the Kwansai district, it is just as displeasing to know that the majority of the trade is carried on by foreigners. Kobe is an inlet for the irregular foreign state; the strong foreign odour that emits from the port being nauseating to the average Japan. ese. The correspondent goes on to lift the veil from what he describes as the dark side of ... Kobe-the foreign settlement. He talks of the "imported gentlemen and ladies who are seen walking about with an air of superiority as if-Kobe belonged to themselves." He also refers. to the "hypocrite kaikarra people "-apparently alluding to the foreigners' servants.

According to our translation, among theforeign community of Kobs are being practised Despaired flattery and fraud, strong superstie . tion, corruption and degradation in an unusual " manner, astonishing dissipation and immoral, ignominious, inhuman brutal acts." Oneshudders to think of the awful surroundings in which we live! And the worst of it is, as the correspondent adds : " Much about them is . unknown even to the Kobe people." "In America, which is indiscriminately worshipped indicates that a typhoon is believed to be by a section of the Japanese," he proceeds, "the habit of revering women has been developed to excess-indeed, to such an extent that the husband has no right to demand fidelity from his wife." The insinuation is obvicus. By such forced and foolish statements the writer seeks to show that the morals of the foreigners No. 111. Signal will be accompanied by the as a body are such as cannot compare with his Explosive Bombs, as above, in the event of the own and those of his readers, and he relates . information conveyed by this signal being first certain interviews with Japanese people of the lowest class in Kobe to prove his statements, and also refers in modest terms to the blushes, which he endured on hearing the revelations, Having tarred all foreigners with the same brush, this very virtuous correspondent admits that even among foreign residents of an open, port there are "a few exceptions." There are found some sober, honest and upright gentlemen, who can be regarded as the model of what a gentleman should be. But he urgeseach of the following stations during the time as many have often urged-before-that one cannot judge by appearances. He is of opinion. that the foreign community of Kobe is very, very bad; and, as we have said, his article would be distinctly humorous were it, not for the auti-foreign feeling it is apparently intended to engender amongst a certain class of Japanese, We thought the Asalis was above this kind of thing .- Japan Chronicis,
